VisiCalc (for "visible calculator") was the first spreadsheet computer program for personal computers, originally released for the Apple II by VisiCorp. It is often considered the application that turned the microcomputer from a hobby for computer enthusiasts into a serious business tool, prompting IBM to introduce the IBM PC two years later. VisiCalc is considered the Apple II's killer app.

A major step in highlighting the significance of tactile sensing technology and its possible applications was taken by Harmon in 1980 with his review. The potential of this technology was further emphasized by two more papers which followed shortly afterwards. The unavailability of any design criteria was still a major obstacle to progress.

A presentation program is a software package used to display information in the form of a slide show. It has three major functions: an editor that allows text to be inserted and formatted, a method for inserting and manipulating graphic images, and a slide-show system to display the content. Presentation software can be viewed as enabling a functionally-specific category of electronic media ...
